TCP is a connection-oriented protocol that provides reliable data delivery.
It uses a three-way handshake to establish connections.
TCP provides flow control using a sliding window mechanism.
It ensures ordered delivery of data packets.